Lourenceta has changed. Arnaldo (Ar) Lemos Filho is a Portuguese lawyer, writer and university professor. At first, he was a classical liberal, but ended up with the ideas of laissez-faire and laissez-passer. Lemos Filho has been a professor at the Faculty of Law of the University of Lisbon, the USP Lisbon, and the Universities of Santa Maria and Coimbra, but always in the discipline of Laws. Prior to working as a professor, he was a professor of Economic and Social Sciences. Lemos Filho has taken part in several academic controversies. In 1992, he was co-author of the dissertation The Economic and Legal Nature of the Right to Justice. Since then, he has participated in the scientific debate on the field, especially the theory of the market failures and the dialectics of the economic and social sciences. Lemos Filho has been very active in the early stages of the Portuguese Integralism, which he was the Director of the Coordination Committee of the Integralists during the elections of 1992.

Lemos Filho was a member of the Consultative Assembly of the European Union, in which he represented Portugal. In 1995 he was Vice-Chair of the Commission on European Social Policy, and in 1996 he was Director of the Commission on Community and Social Rights. That same year, he was elected President of the Portuguese Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. From October 1998 to October 1999, he was Deputy Chairman of the European Commission for Justice, Freedom, and Security. On December 8, 2000, he was re-elected President of the Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, and in 2001 he founded the journal "Journal of Criminal Law and International Relations".
